

I currently listen to K-LOVE radio station, which is often heard on FM translators. K-LOVE is a radio station I can safely listen to in my car with my children. Many in my community also listen to this station. It is a welcome alternative to the often objectionable music and DJ chatter heard on most other radio stations in my area. With a young and impressionable audience, it is important to have a safe place for listening to music. Without family friendly programming like this, we are only left with alternatives that expose our children to inappropriate commentary and music that crosses the boundaries of decency. I urge you to not enact this proposed rule change. Keep the FM translator service available to family friendly programming!
